Business Problem

Microsoft wants to create a new movie studio.

- What type of movies are currently doing the best?
- Microsoft's brand is valuable.
- Generate actionable insights!

Data

- Data Source:
 - Box Office Mojo
 - IMDB
 - TheMovieDB.org
- Dependent Variables to optimize:
 - $\text{ROI} = \text{profit} / \text{budget}$
 - Average vote
 - We'll also talk about absolute profit
- Independent Variables which influence ROI and average vote:
 - Runtime
 - Budget
 - Genre
 - Studio

Methods

- Joined data from many sources
- Analyzed 1000+ movies
- Plotted and computed regression lines comparing 1 independent and dependent variable at a time
- Iteratively improved expected ROI by fixing best options for dependent variables
- Stopped when sample size became too small to remain meaningful

Results: Percent of Movie Profitable

Percent of Movie Which Are Profitable

Question: Is movie making money?

Studio To Study: High Budget Long Movie

No standout studios (LGF has only Hunger Games). High Budget seems dominated by expensive IP. Further analysis required, but Superhero movies seem like safe bets.

	original_title	studio	runtime_minutes	ROI	profit	averagerating	genres
909	The Hunger Games	LGF	142.0	7.474042	597923379	7.2	Action,Adventure,Sci-Fi

727	Skyfall	Sony	143.0	4.552635	910526981	7.8	Action,Adventure,Thriller

Conclusions

- “Middle of the Road” movies are the worst across all metrics:
 - Make a low-budget (for best ROI) or high budget (for best profit, best ratings, good ROI) movie, not a middle budget movie
 - Make a movie that is either long or short, not medium length
- Pick Genre that suits budget and length:
 - Horror, Thriller for Low Budget Short Movies
 - Action, Adventure, Sci-Fi, Thriller for High Budget Long Movies
- Intellectual Property seems important for successful High Budget Long Movies
 - Buy movie rights for comic book superheroes or popular books.
- Further Research
 - We can help analyze directors, writers, actors within a certain genre, budget, runtime once you make a decision!
